A still life composition for a spa or relaxation theme. In the center, two thick, grey, textured towels are rolled up and stacked. To the left, a small green plant with white flowers sits next to a stack of dark, ribbed bowls and a bundle of cinnamon sticks tied with a white string. To the right, three lit candles in various shapes provide a warm, golden glow. In the foreground, several smooth, dark grey stones are scattered. A small brass bowl filled with pink salt crystals sits on the stones, next to a glass bottle with a cork stopper. The background is dark and out of focus.

About Málaga

Malaga is a city located in Andalusia, in the south of Spain on the Mediterranean coast. For a long time in the shadow of other famous Andalusian cities such as Seville, Granada, or Cordoba, the capital of the Costa del Sol is now a popular seaside resort, with a beautiful historical center, must-see monuments, about thirty museums, and beautiful beaches.

Everywhere along the beaches, you'll find small food stalls called Chiringuitos, where you can eat fish and seafood dishes. In Malaga, the local speciality is grilled sardines ("espetos de sardinas") served on skewers!

Pablo Picasso is known all around the world for having introduced cubism. He was born in Malaga in 1881 and has a museum to his name today. You can visit Museo Picasso Malaga any time of the year and admire his masterpieces.

Another famous person born in Malaga, in 1960, is Spanish actor Antonio Banderas.

Málaga's history spans about 2,800 years making it one of the oldest cities in Europe and one of the oldest continuously inhabited cities in the world. According to most scholars, it was founded about 770 BC by the Phoenicians as 'Malaka', which means Factory.

Between Málaga and Cádiz there is Grazalema, a town in which they have the record for rainfall. It has historically registered the highest rainfall in Spain. The 2,000 liters of water per square meter of rainfall that is usually recorded on average per year have made it the town where it rains the most in the entire country.

The port of Malaga hasn't stopped operating since at least 600 BC. It is today one of the busiest seaports on the Mediterranean, this is probably due to its fantastic location and general intense activity. In the 21st century, the port of Malaga is being modernized and incorporated into the city.
